

Research on the Innovative Thinking of Political System Reform in the Perspective of Economy

Lei Yang

School of Law and Public Management, North China University of Water Resources and Electric Power, Zhengzhou, 450045, China

Abstract: In today's growing economy in our country, how to rationally examine the political system reform and innovation in the economic perspective has become the top priority. "Chinese dream" is not only "realize the great rejuvenation of the Chinese nation is the greatest dream for Chinese people in modern times". But also to jointly build China's political, economic, cultural, social and ecological civilization. In the tide of historical development, the scientific concept of development to make the system gradually improve mutual synergy. Under the function of the law of economic market value, it is an important factor for the success of China's economic development to choose the correct leadership of our party, choose the right direction of reform and seek innovative development. Nowadays, in the continuous reform of the political system, drawing lessons from the laws and successful factors in economic development also needs to be emphatically studied and discussed. We should actively explore ways to reform the political and economic systems, adhere to the correct outlook on development, and promote sustained and sound economic and political development under the guidance of the party.

Keywords: socialist economy; Chinese dream; reform process

1. Introduction

Since the president xi put forward the great concept of "Chinese dream" in the 18th of the National People's Congress, "Chinese dream" is not just a dream, it is a guide for us committing to peaceful development, sustainable development, carry forward the spirit of the important instructions, it also presented many important goals and direction of our country in this stage. In terms of overall national strength, China has become the second largest economy in the world.

The strong and rapid development also makes the continue development become the key of building a moderately prosperous society, adhere to the economic health of sustainable development to attain to the gross domestic product (GDP) in 2020 and the income of urban and rural residents than doubled in 2010, the development of science and technology also want to contribution to economic growth have risen sharply, and make our country into an innovative country, not only hard power, soft power aspects such as the people's democracy and culture education should also be made. This shows that even in the face of a strong economic foundation, we should follow effective, scientific and innovative reform ideas, not to mention the reform and innovation of China's political system.

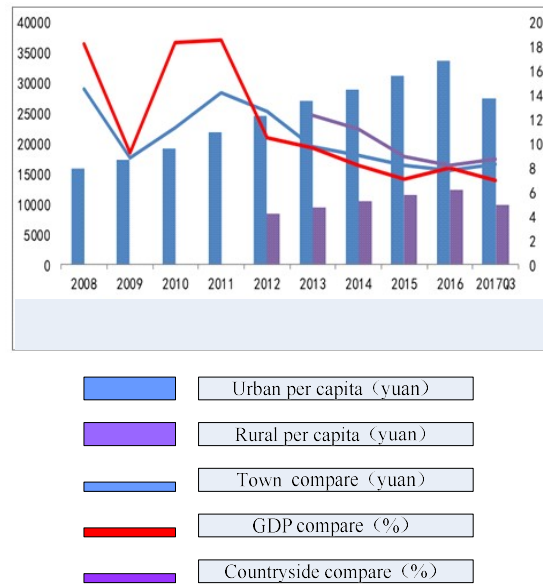

Figure 1. China's urban and rural residents per capita disposable income growth rate and GDP growth

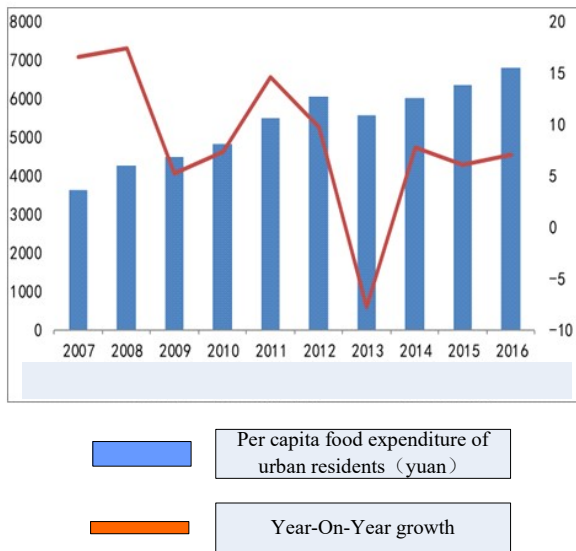

Figure 2. In the past decade, the per capita expenditure on food and the year-on-year growth rate for urban residents have increased

2. The Success Experience in China's Economic Reform, Innovation and Development

2.1. The exploration in the process of economic development

From the economic reform to nowadays has been more than 30 years. During this period, it has experienced four stages: the economic reform opens and the verification stage; the stage of comprehensive exploration obtained in the experiment; the initial construction stage of socialist market economy system; the stage for improving the socialist market economy.

Nowadays we achievement is the results of the trial and error and continuous innovation and reform.

2.2. The significance of economic change

Before the reform of the system, people's recognition of socialist economy was that the higher the degree of socialization, the more fit the nature of the system and the interests of the people. Therefore, after the abolition of the individual and private economy, the market economy as the patent of capitalism was completely abandoned. The launch of the economic system reform, especially the reform of urban industrial enterprises, makes the resources and products of the whole society no longer under the unified contract and unified distribution. As a result, there will be differences in the interests between individual workers, enterprises, and enterprises and laborers, and the question of how to allocate social resources effectively arises. Understanding and solving these problems involves understanding and attitude towards the market and the law of price and value. Since the 12th national congress of the communist party of China, we have been exploring the idea of "establishing a planned system that consciously applies the law of value" and taking the opportunity of price reform to develop the "socialist commodity economy". However, it was not until the 14th national congress of the communist party of China that our understanding of the market reached a new level, and we made clear the dominant role of the law of value in economic life and the basic position of the market in the allocation of social resources.

2.3. Basic experience in building a socialist market economy

First, there must be clear theoretical guidelines for reform. Reform is the first revolutionary tradition of theory and thought, through the release of theoretical innovation of the people's thinking, the unity of human understanding, the need to provide reform and practice of the open mind to ensure that yes. Second, reform must have a strong core of leadership. China is a typical large developing country, because its vastness, the situation of local economy and the difference of local economy all determine the complexity and difficulty of the reform process. In order to coordinate and manage such a country, it is necessary to have a strong core of leadership to build and develop in accordance with the unified thinking. Otherwise, there will be chaos and society will not develop properly. Third, we will always focus on economic development. In the course of reform, we have always been closely related to the economic development center and closely integrated with the economic development policy of reform and opening up. Fourth, the interests of the people should be put first. In the course of reform, we have respected the pioneering spirit of the people and paid close attention to safeguarding the interests of the people. The beginning of a series of influential reform measures in the process of reform is based on the concrete reform experience and practice created by the people at the grass-roots level. Fifth, focus on institutional reform. Innovation is the soul of a country and the inexhaustible driving force for its development. Sixth, we need to maintain a stable relationship between reform and development. In the course of reform, we have been very careful to maintain social stability, making stability our top political challenge. In order to understand the strategy for promoting reform, we're not going to do it in a general way, because we're not going to do it up and down, but you have to pay special attention to moving forward through the pilot, step by step. Seventh, pay attention to the scientific and artistic nature of the reform strategy. Generally speaking, China's reform follows the path of gradual reform and adopts reform strategies to achieve major breakthroughs and all-round progress. Eighth, cooperative development and system progress. In the process of economic reform, the idea of institutional reform gradually emerged, and the reform and adjustment were effectively strengthened. In carrying out reform, special attention is paid to the socio-economic environment or the conditions of reform. If the environment is good, we will introduce some important reform measures as soon as possible. Ninth, make scientific use of the world's resources and the achievements of advanced civilizations. Opening to the outside world is in itself China's biggest reform. Since reform and opening up, we have expanded our ties with the international economy, deepened our interactions with countries around the world, scientifically absorbed the global resource situation and achievements of advanced civilizations, and systematically used them for internal reform. It releases connections. Tenth, proceed from reality and take the road of development with Chinese characteristics. China's reform has been a great success, demonstrating the success of the development path with Chinese characteristics. The 30-year reform process has not only demonstrated China's success, but also had a significant impact on China's practice.

2.4. Continue to improve the system in the guide of economic reform

The country is gradually building a socialist market economy in line with the approach of gradual institutional reform and the pursuit of legitimate interests. This series of reform measures have been upgraded, and the fundamental reason is that under the leadership of the communist party of China, the country has been constantly innovating and improving its national economic system and political system. As for the economic field, under the guidance of the party's leadership thought, it mainly focuses on two major issues: "what is socialism" and "the method of building socialism". The concrete manifestation is: first, strengthens the socialism essence understanding; Second, correctly position the essence of "market".

3. The Enlightenment of China's Economic Reform on Political System Reform

After the success of the economic restructuring, our party clearly recognized the importance and urgency of political restructuring and began to explore ways and means of political restructuring. In the course of exploration, we have been closely linked with the political philosophy in actual political life, marxism in China, and the actual situation of the goals and methods of China's political system reform.

First of all, the party clearly recognizes that political restructuring is an inevitable requirement of China's overall social reform, especially of the economic system. According to the basic principles of marxist political philosophy, the two basic elements of socialist reform are systematic engineering, economic system reform and political system reform. Whether the relationship between the two areas of reform can be properly handled, and economic reform and political reform are coordinated, the overall progress, it is directly related to the overall cause of reform success or failure. After a specific distortion and change, China's reform has been deepening and moving in the right direction. It has been promoting effective economic construction and social development. Our reform is the key to success, which is also the scientific understanding of the relationship between economic restructuring and political restructuring formed by our political party under the correct guidance of marxist political philosophy. In the process of reform, our political party, not only the political system reform is a social reform, but also deeply understand that this is one of the most important links.

Second, our party has correctly defined the basic objectives of China's political restructuring. To be more specific, the constant improvement of socialist democracy, the institutionalization of democracy and the legalization of democratic life are the basic goals of building a highly civilized socialist democratic polities. china's political restructuring is a fundamental goal. The fact that the people are the masters of the state is the basic condition for the socialist political system and its superiority.

Third, through the reform of the political system, to achieve the rationalization of the political structure and political management efficiency. This is an important part of political development under the socialist situation.

4. Conclusion

Now after emphasizing the idea of "centering on economic construction" for more than 20 years, the 16th national congress of the communist party of China has confirmed that the development of building a moderately prosperous society and the construction of socialist political civilization and socialist democratic politics are important goals of political construction. In order to promote the socialist material civilization, political civilization and spiritual civilization the coordinated development of the tenth National People's Congress second conference through amendments to the constitution of the human rights protection and respect ", these decided to firmly establish the scientific outlook on development reflects the party and the country, for China's political system reform and the development of political civilization provides a strong driving force and broad space. In the future, it is very important to realize these decisions through institutional reform and innovation.

References

- [1] Lundvall B Å. National innovation systems—analytical concept and development tool. Industry and innovation. 2007, 14(1): 95-119.

-
- [2] Przeworski A. Democracy and the market: Political and economic reforms in Eastern Europe and Latin America. Cambridge University Press. 1991.
- [3] Weingast B R. The economic role of political institutions: Market-preserving federalism and economic development. Journal of Law, Economics, & Organization. 1995: 1-31.
- [4] Beeson M. Globalization, Governance, and the Political - Economy of Public Policy Reform in East Asia. Governance. 2001, 14(4): 481-502.